

SHIFTING LANDSCAPES

Protocol Training for Building Long-Term Research Relationships in Oklahoma Indian Country

This learning opportunity / workshop is designed for non-Native scholars (faculty members, postdocs, and graduate students) and non-Native government employees and researchers at OU to gain a better understanding of and greater appreciation for working in Indian Country – especially in Oklahoma.

Those who attend will participate in a number of activities and discussions designed to create a greater awareness of:

- 1) Understanding the historical context of Oklahoma Indian Country,
- 2) Building research relationships,
- 3) Working collaboratively with tribal organizations, and
- 4) Nurturing respectful relationships.

Faculty members, researchers, and scholars will leave the workshop with a number of tools and resources designed to provide optimal potential for developing long-term research relationships with tribal organizations.
